An artist is sitting at a drawing board, struggling for inspiration. As ideas occur to him he scribbles them down, proudly holding them up for us to see...only to reject them after further thought. Soon he's rejecting ideas as fast as he can think them up, tossing them into a nearby waste basket.

While this is going on, he's completely oblivious to the fascinating parade of strange sights going on outside a large picture window behind him. When his frustration reaches the breaking point, he gets up and dumps the now overflowing waste basket out the window.

Will he finally get the brainstorm he's been looking for?
